FIREBRANDS MUTE AT MEETING OF JOBLESS

Police Ready for Expected Rumpus in Union Square—No Trouble.

HOBOES NOT FOR STRIFE

The police arrangements were the most impressive thing about the meeting of the unemployed "of New York and vicinity" held yesterday afternoon in Union Square. The police had to be there, and the unemployed didn't seem to be against it.

Cards distributed widely a week ago announcing the meeting said: "Are you going to starve this winter with the warehouses filled to overflowing? This winter will be one of the worst in the history of the city and you are up against it. What is the way out?"

The Sun's broad line is evidence that there are plenty who are up against it. There were few or none among the 250-odd who met in Union Square yesterday. It had been rumored that the meeting had been planned to organize a march upon and overwhelm the Municipal Lodging House the first night that storm and want are most closely associated. But few or none of those who might of night march in such a procession were present.

Wore Latest Thing in Hats.
Instead Chief Inspector Schmittberger, who had charge of the elaborate policing of the meeting, looked down upon a gathering which displayed for the most part quite the latest thing in hats, and there were few or none who suggested even remotely actual need.

The Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes of the Church of the Messiah dropped in for a look and went away after listening to a few speeches. He said he had come because he wanted to "keep in touch" with things.

And there was one stalwart, keen eyed young man who gave an explanation of the general look of comfort and well being about the crowd. Said he: "We don't want the down-and-outers at these meetings. We want men with the fight left in them. Most of the men you see are, like me, unemployed, but we haven't reached the bread line stage yet. We'll take what we need before we come to that."

Some of the banners hoisted above the speakers' stand voiced similar sentiments. They read: "We want all we produce." "Homeless men revolt." "We do not live to work; we work to live."

The unemployed must and will help themselves. Samuel Hartman, said to be of the Ferrer school, was chairman of the meeting. He introduced many speakers who spoke from the heart, but said nothing to bring into action the police, who very nearly outnumbered the "unemployed."

Append to Gov. Whitman.
Alexander Law of the International Brotherhood of Welfare Association, delegate to a convention of the "migratory and casual workers, day laborers and unemployed" to be held in San Francisco on February 15, presented a resolution calling upon Gov. Whitman to put the transportation systems of New York on an eight hour basis "as a most practical means of lessening the unemployed." The crowd announced that it favored the resolution.

Jim Larkin, leader of the Dublin strike, was seen in the crowd. He did not address the meeting.

The members of J. Eads Howe's hobo organization, who were at "winter quarters" in 61 East Fourth street yesterday, said that if a parade of the unemployed was made incendiary speeches at the meeting of the unemployed in Union Square the hoboos had no sympathy with them. The hoboos were law abiding people, they said.

Plays and Players.
Charles Hopkins will produce Alfred Hitchcock's comedy, "The Crier Ones," at the Punch and Judy Theatre, beginning January 28.
Marie Dressler, star of "A Mix-Up," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, has closed a contract to write a book of anecdotes entitled "When Everybody Laughs," dealing with incidents during the days of travesty productions at Weber & Fields Broadway music hall.

Robert W. Goelet, Miss Carol Harriman, Dr. Lyle and Miss Helen Porter.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Robert Goelet entertained a large party at his home at Glenmore this afternoon previous to the trotting races on the ice. An orchestra furnished the music.

Among the guests were Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and brother, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Deland, Mrs. William Douglas, Albert Foster, Mrs. James Gordon Douglas, Frederick Herreshoff, William Burden, Miss Carol A. Harriman, Dr. Lyle, Judge Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Titus, Mrs. S. A. Crumney, Dr. Pease, ex-rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Pease; B. A. Bulkeley, L. D. Plim, John R. Townsend, Dr. and Mrs. D. T. Condit, Mrs. O. H. Stillman, Miss Helen Porter, Miss A. S. H. Wiborg and Miss M. Douison.

The racing was started at 2 o'clock and a crowd of 1,000 persons assembled on the lake to witness the sport. The horses were harnessed in a course half a mile in length had been laid out for the trotters and some exciting finishes were witnessed. The ice was a foot thick and the crowd that assembled arrived in automobiles and sleighs.

There was a toboggan slide for those who desired to coast, besides an iceboat on the lake. Many enjoyed the fine skating.

The lake is nearly five miles long and was in fine shape for the various sports. In the racing the Parkway Farm horses, owned by B. A. Bulkeley and driven by Frank Burgess, carried off two first prizes with Trampnose and Cora Mater in the half mile trotting races on ice today. The other events were won by Margery Patchen, driven by W. K. Dickerson, and King Hingen, owned by Bud Murray.

Robert Goelet, who planned the carnival, had a mount in each race. The summaries:

UTICA WOMAN DIES ON FIFTH AVE. SIDEWALK

Mrs. H. G. Newcomer Stricken While Walking With Husband and Sons.

Mrs. Nellie Newcomer, wife of H. G. Newcomer, president and general manager of the Eureka Mower Company of Utica, N. Y., died of heart trouble at 10 o'clock last night while walking with her husband and two sons on Fifth avenue near Fortieth street. When stricken she fell into her husband's arms. Policeman McDonald, on post near by, ran to the scene and called an ambulance from the New York Hospital and fetch a chair for Mrs. Newcomer, but before Dr. Dineen arrived she was dead.

Mrs. Newcomer came to New York a few days ago. She lives at 1265 Elm street, Utica. Mrs. Newcomer, despite a recent illness, came with her sons, Francis G., 15, and Roger H., 9, to surprise her husband here for the holidays, arriving at the Belmont Hotel on Thursday. After dinner last night the boys wanted to walk. Mr. and Mrs. Newcomer joined them on Fifth avenue with Frederick W. Lohr of Hardman, Peck & Co., a friend of Mr. Newcomer. The visitors went to see Mr. Lohr's place of business. They had come out and were near Fortieth street, the boys walking ahead, when Mrs. Newcomer was stricken.

CARDINAL GIBBONS GIVES CANDY

BALTIMORE, Jan. 1.—Probably fifty children that Cardinal Gibbons met today on the street while taking his daily walk were invited to accompany him to his residence. There he treated all to candy and gave them each a few pennies.

After talking with them for a brief time he bestowed the blessing upon the children and then sent them off to their homes.

The Cardinal was reticent about talking of the affair. He was merely an idea that came upon the suddenly, to bring cheer to their little lives," he said. "They seemed very happy, and it did me good to see their surprise when I gave them the candy."

With Two Other Loves, Rogers Clung to First

learned within three years of her husband's love for another woman. But she is strong of will and intense in her devotion and she kept that secret to herself. Now that the revelation has come with a tragedy she is reported to be in a pitiable condition.

Her brother, Prof. Giddings, was almost overcome yesterday when he spoke of her and of her loyalty. He is a big man, mentally as well as physically, and yet it was hard for him to keep a grip on his feelings. He was asked if he or his sister would say anything in answer to the assertion of Mrs. Ida Rogers that Mrs. Caroline Rogers had made a written promise to release Rogers at a certain time.

Professor's Voice Chokes.
There was a choke in the professor's voice and his big eyes filled with a suspicion of tears as he said:

"I can't put myself in a position of discussing the statements of a dying woman." Then he had been telling of the ordeal through which his sister was passing—he became silent under the stress of feeling. In a moment he continued:

"And my sister is unwilling to be placed in a position where she must say all of any of the parties in this affair. That's the kind of stuff she is made of."

Prof. Giddings met the reporters in Kent Hall, Columbia University. There were the usual New Year greetings, with wishes for happiness, in sharp contrast with the professor's demeanor. He was asked first if the report was true that his sister had been to see the woman in the hospital. He replied:

"My sister has not had her clothes on since Tuesday. She is in bed and she is likely to remain there for many days. In fact I fear that unless she comes out of the strain that she is undergoing she will suffer physical collapse."

"I read to her this morning a summary of the statements of Mrs. Ida Rogers, as she is called, from the morning newspapers, including the statement in regard to the alleged written promise that she made to release her husband. She said: 'Let me alone for a few minutes until I think it over.' I went away, and when I returned she said:

"You may say for me that I am not in any condition to talk at present, and perhaps I shall not be at any time willing to talk, but if I have anything to say it will be in a statement made, signed and sworn to before a notary."

That statement, coming from a woman, had a crispness that indicated a remarkable strength of mind and a woman who had a will of her own. She is described as 52 years old, with gray hair, pleasing eyes and features denoting strength.

Lawyers in Family
Prof. Giddings was asked if his sister or he had an attorney. "No," he said smilingly, "no lawyer has been consulted, but we have a family full of lawyers. Two of my brothers are lawyers and my son, if Prof. Giddings, is an attorney in Atlantic City."

The conversation turned to the early acquaintance between Miss Caroline Giddings and Rogers, and then to her acquaintance with the first Mrs. Rogers. In answer to a question he quoted his sister as saying that she had not met Mrs. Rogers from a period before his first marriage until six years afterward. He asked if his sister had ever met Mrs. Ida Rogers in regard to the two women might be taken to mean that Mrs. Rogers had met the woman now in the hospital he said he had no other information on the subject and was not responsible for inferences.

Reports were gathered in Mountain View and in The Bronx that Rogers himself was in financial straits. There was a report that he had been to the police, but Prof. Giddings would enter into no discussion concerning that to say:

"If at any time he has borrowed money from my sister it has been a loan, free of interest. It was an amicable arrangement. If there is any obligation on his part I am perfectly sure that it has not been a factor of any kind in their relations or the relation of any party outside. Everything was entirely amicable."

PROF. ROGERS IS BRIDE IN MOCK SEA WEDDING

Columbia Instructor Is Led to Altar by Girl Clad as Bridegroom.

An exceptionally joyous, not to say weird, celebration of the new year at sea occurred aboard the American steamship Oceana, which arrived yesterday from Bermuda with 215 passengers, including Mrs. Edward P. Minot, who went to the steamer just before she departed, for Bermuda last week to see some friends off and was persuaded to go along with them. She had only a vanity case as baggage, but her friends gave her an outfit from their own wardrobes.

Mrs. Morse advocates unpremeditated voyages, which she says are always pleasanter than those you think about much before you take them. She told the ship news men that she never had so fine a time ushering in the new year, which was due partly to the presence aboard of 75 Columbia students, mostly members of the glee club and the minstrel troupe. It was 4:30 A. M. when she went to bed yesterday morning and the glee club was still warbling to Papa Neptune.

A mock marriage, new sufrage style was part of the celebration. Miss Panny Yates of Elmira pretended she was the bridegroom and was properly arrayed in the evening clothes of the shortest of the glee club boys, and Prof. L. P. Rogers of Columbia, who is a head taller than Miss Yates, played the bride in a dress built for the tallest girl aboard the ship, who is a head shorter than the professor. That happened quite early in the morning, some time after 2 or 3, or something like that, the glee club students snored. The bridesmaids were all students, too, as such.

Minot-Wed Engagement.
Rogers, Jan. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Minot of New York have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian L. Minot, to Dr. George Richards Minot of this city. Dr. Minot is a son of Dr. James Minot and a graduate of Harvard, class of 1908.

Throughout the day Rogers himself was in the hospital. Though he telephoned to his first wife he made no effort to get into communication with her. A hat of his love for children and his grief over the loss of Lorida, the baby girl.

It had been intimated to Mr. Jacobs that the statement of Mrs. Ida Rogers on the previous day, coming from her through a friend and not through Rogers, made it seem likely that Rogers was not willing to put her side before the public. In answer to that theory Mr. Jacobs said: "Rogers will neither deny nor confirm any statement. He will remain silent. Furthermore, we don't believe the friend was authorized to make the statement, and we don't believe that Mrs. Rogers gave him that statement."

The Board of City Magistrates for the First division at its meeting Thursday appointed Miss Kathryn Daly of 454 Central Park West a stenographer for the police courts. Miss Daly is the first woman stenographer to obtain a position in the criminal courts of Manhattan and is the first woman stenographer to obtain a position in the criminal courts of Manhattan and is the first woman stenographer to obtain a position in the criminal courts of Manhattan.

The appointment was looked upon by the champions of the women's cause yesterday as a victory for the women who are demanding more extended employment of women in the city administration. The Magistrates had twice previously denied her application for appointment, although she stood at the head of the civil service eligible list and was so certified to the Board of Magistrates.

In each case there was only one vacancy and the highest three names on the eligible list were submitted—Miss Daly and those of two men. One of the men was selected each time.

The Magistrates were opposed to having girl stenographers in the police courts, where the testimony taken is often of a shocking character. In addition the work is arduous and a severe strain on the nerves.

"If the girl stenographer can stand the awful language why should the Judge worry about her sensibilities? That the girls are able to do the work is shown in the applications," a representative of a woman's organization said in her argument with the Magistrates.

The full board of Magistrates was present when the matter came up Thursday and Miss Daly was appointed by a large majority. There was a letter from Clarence J. Shearn, appointed recently to the Supreme Court by Gov. Glynn, saying he knew Miss Daly to be a competent law stenographer, as she has had fifteen years experience.

The new stenographer was employed for several years in the United States
